One possible version: (A)

Dear Jim,

I'm so glad to hear that you're interested in Spring Festival. Here, I'm writing this letter to tell you something about it.

Spring Festival, like Christmas, is a week-long holiday, starting from the last day of the 12th lunar month to the 7th day of the first lunar month. Weeks before Spring Festival, people start to prepare for the family reunion. We clean the house from top to the bottom, hoping to sweep away the bad luck of the passing year. We also attach the Chinese character Fu upside down, which is believed to bring happiness to the family.

Hope you can come and spend the Spring Festival with me in Beijing. Write to me if you need more information. (120)

Yours,

Li Hua

One possible version: (B)

Although the Internet may connect us with friends faraway, I think it does more harm than good to friendship. I have two reasons for my point.

First, the Internet steals bits and pieces of our time and attention. We may be absorbed in the online games and short videos, and therefore, ignore our friends. No doubt that may hurt our friendship. Second, there is a danger that online friends may not be real friends. In that case, we're putting our safety and reputation at risk.

I think we'd better have more off-line communications with our friends. It's important to meet friends in person from time to time, not just on the Internet. (112)
