Soon there will be a Review Blitz! In a month, we are searching for reasonable reviews that reflect your sincere opinions. Just keep in mind that the deadline for your reviews is October 23, 2023.

Rules:

- ◇ To enter, you must be a teen (aged 13-19) with a Teen Creativity account.
- ◇ Submissions ought to be relevant to the topic.
- ◇ Each review must be no more than 250 words.
- ◇ There is no restriction on the number of pieces you can submit.

Guidelines:

- ◇ Give a brief summary of the book. Avoid explaining the entire plot or telling your reader how the book ends.
- ◇ Inform the reader what you like or dislike about the book.
- ◇ Recommend the book to specific readers. Does the book lend itself well to older teens? Would science fiction enthusiasts show interest in this book? It's helpful for readers to think about the book in light of other books they've read.

- ◇ Remember that it's okay to have a strong opinion! Don't start sentences with "I think", "I believe" or "In my opinion".

Prizes:

- ◇ All participants will be given a certificate.
- ◇ First prize winners will respectively have one review published in Teen Creativity magazine and obtain a free 6-month magazine subscription.
- ◇ Second-place winners will each receive a free 3-month magazine subscription.
- ◇ You'll receive these prizes before December 28, 2023.

Submit your works to www.teencreativity.com. We hope reviewing books brings you joy.

21. Which of the following meets the requirement of Review Blitz? A. A person can present no more than one piece of work.
B. Each piece of work can have a maximum of 250 words.
C. Reviews must be written by people under 20 years old.
D. Works must be uploaded by the end of October 2023.
22. What should participants include in their reviews? A. The likes and dislikes of the book.
B. The recommendation to all readers.
C. Statements containing "In my opinion".
D. A summary that demonstrates the whole plot.
23. Who is the text intended for?
A. Self-learners.    B. Teaching staff.
C. Professional trainers.    D. Bookish adolescents.

B

When I made the decision to quit my full-time employment, I never thought that I could get involved in an increasing global trend. I had to leave my relatively high-profile position for an unexpected move that hurt my pride and prevented me from getting promoted. Yet, I excused my departure by saying "I wanted to spend more time with my family".

Curiously, after around two and a half years, my experience in what Americans refer to as "downshifting" has turned my excuse into an absolute reality. I have been transformed from a passionate advocate of Linda Kelsey's "have it all" concept, which she has been promoting for the past seven years in the pages of She magazine, into a woman who is content to accept a little bit of everything.

I have discovered that abandoning the idea of "juggling your life" and adopting the alternative strategy of "downshifting" has benefits that go far beyond financial success and social status. Nothing could convince me to go back to the lifestyle Kelsey used to promote and which I had previously enjoyed: 12-hour workdays, tight deadlines, the terrifying pressure of office politics, and the demand of being a parent on "quality time".

After the widespread layoffs (裁员) brought on by cost-cutting in the late 1980s, America started to move toward a simpler, less materialistic way of life as a response to the economic downturn. In America, simplifying one's life is frequently done for financial reasons, but in Britain, at least among the middle class I know, we have different motivations for doing so. For the women of my generation who were encouraged to keep juggling, downshifting is not so much a search for a mythical (虚无的) good life—growing your own organic vegetables, and risking turning into one—as a personal recognition of your limitations.

24. What can we learn from paragraph 1?
- A. The writer didn't take pride in her original job.
  - B. Full-time employment is a new international trend.
  - C. The writer was eager to spend more time with her family.
  - D. The writer was forced to resign due to an external factor.
25. What do we know about downshifting according to the text?
- A. The writer abandoned her high social status for downshifting.
  - B. Downshifting allowed the writer to make her dream come true.
  - C. The writer changed her way of thinking through downshifting.
  - D. The writer accepted the concept of She magazine because of downshifting.
26. What does the underlined phrase "juggling your life" in paragraph 3 mean?
- A. Settling for a bit of everything.
  - B. Choosing to live a simple life.
  - C. Adopting a busy and stressful lifestyle.
  - D. Staying away from a materialistic way of life.
27. What does the writer intend to tell us?
- A. It is never too late to pursue your dream.
  - B. Downshifting results in a more satisfactory and simpler life.
  - C. There is a difference between the American and British cultures.
  - D. People should adopt downshifting to search for mythical experiences.

C

Like most nerds who read science fiction, I've kept wondering how society will greet true artificial intelligence, if and when it arrives. Will we panic? Ignore it and go about our daily lives? Hence, it's been fascinating to watch the Twittersphere try to make sense of ChatGPT, a new cutting-edge A.I. chatbot opened for testing at the end of 2022. ChatGPT—which stands for "generative pre-trained transformer"—landed with a splash. In five days, more than a million people signed up to test it.

In recent years, though a few A.I. tools have gotten good at doing narrow and well-defined tasks, like writing marketing copy, they still tend to be weak when taken outside their comfort zones. But ChatGPT feels different. Smarter. More flexible. It can write jokes and college-level essays. It can also guess at medical diagnoses, and even seems good at answering the types of open-ended analytical questions which frequently appear on school assignments.

The technology that powers ChatGPT isn't, strictly speaking, new. It's based on what the company calls "GPT-3.5," an upgraded version of GPT-3 in 2020. While the existence of a highly capable linguistic superbrain might be old news to A.I. researchers, it's the first time such a powerful tool has been made available to the general public through a free, easy-to-use web interface.

Unlike Google, ChatGPT doesn't crawl the web for information on current events, and its knowledge is restricted to things it learned before 2021. Since ChatGPT training data includes billions of examples of human opinion, representing every reasonable view, it's also, in some sense, moderate by design. Without specific prompting, for example, it's hard to coax (诱导) a strong opinion out of ChatGPT about political debates. Usually, you'll get a fair summary of what each side believes.

28. How did the public initially respond to ChatGPT?
- A. People worried about this new technology.
  - B. Many people found it hard to understand ChatGPT.
  - C. A number of people couldn't wait to register for a try.
  - D. Millions of people were ignorant of this new A.I. chatbot.

29. What can we learn from paragraph 2?
- A. ChatGPT is a typical A.I. tool used for specified tasks.
  - B. A.I. apps provide perfect answers to analytical questions.
  - C. ChatGPT helps doctors with serious medical diagnoses.
  - D. Homework might not be a problem for ChatGPT users.
30. In which aspect is ChatGPT different from the GPT-3?
- A. People can gain access to it free of charge.
  - B. Linguistic researchers speak highly of it.
  - C. It is welcomed by A.I. researchers with enthusiasm.
  - D. It is the first powerful tool open to the general public.
31. What's the text mainly about?
- A. The future of ChatGPT
  - B. The brilliance of ChatGPT
  - C. The development of ChatGPT
  - D. The arguments about ChatGPT

D

The dodo, a Mauritian bird last seen in the 17th century, will be brought back to a semblance (外观) of life if attempts by a gene-editing company are successful. Gene-editing techniques now exist that allow scientists to extract the dodo genome (基因组) that they believe they can then effectively recreate within the body of a living relative.

The scientists in question said their work, beyond providing an insight into the extinct dodo's existence, could help inform the conservation of rare species that are not yet extinct. However, there is a fierce debate among biologists over whether this sort of research should be pursued.

Beth Shapiro, the lead paleo-geneticist (古遗传学家) at Colossal, told the Guardian she tried to persuade a museum to let her extract DNA from a preserved dodo exhibited there. She said there were hundreds of dodos in collections around the world, so it had been possible to sequence the dead bird's genome. But she warned that the revived dodo could never replace what has been made extinct. "It would be crazy to think the solution to the world's biodiversity crisis was to bring back a proxy," she said.

Ben Lamm, the chief executive of the company, said they were raising a further 150 million dollars to pursue the research on the dodo. He pointed out that it could assist conservation efforts for many other threatened species around the world, as it would develop techniques that could allow scientists to detect and preserve key features in those existing species that could help them adapt in a changing climate.

Prof. Ewan Birney from European Molecular Biology Laboratory, who was not involved with Colossal's work, said it would be "very, very challenging" to recreate the dodo genome. He added, "I've no idea whether the project will work as they claim, but the question is not just 'can you do this', but 'should you do it?' ... I'm not sure what purpose it serves, and whether this is really the best distribution of resources. We should be saving the species that we have before they go extinct."

32. What can we learn about dodo from the text?
- A. It is a bird that is only unique to Mauritius.
  - B. The research on it has raised conflicting opinions.
  - C. It has been successfully brought back to life.
  - D. It could be recreated within the remains of a relative.
33. What does the underlined word "proxy" mean in paragraph 3?
- A. fake
  - B. creature
  - C. model
  - D. replacement

34. What's Prof Ewan Birney's attitude towards Colossal's work?
A. Critical                      B. Indifferent                      C. Supportive                      D. Conservative
35. Which is the best title of the passage?
A. Pros and Cons of Reviving Dodo
B. Gene-editing Techniques in Effect
C. Scientists Trying Hard to Recreate Dodo
D. A Vain Attempt to Bring Dodo Back to Life

Soothe the Sunday Scaries

As the weekend comes to an end, many of us are missing out on Sunday Funday and anxious about the upcoming week. Experts have nicknamed this worry the "Sunday scaries". 36 Here's how you can ease your end-of-weekend anxiety.

When structuring your Sunday, try not to arrange too many errands and chores. If you're feeling more stress, it's important to make space for some activities to relax yourself. And there's no right way to do so—maybe a midafternoon shower or bath, maybe an engaging movie or show. 37

Anxiety is a normal human experience, and one of the main ways to manage it is to identify your personal triggers. 38 Is it a deadline, meeting, or presentation? Even if there's not a single reason behind your Sunday anxiety, organizing the stress you expect from the week ahead into small pieces can help it.

Getting rid of the Sunday scaries isn't just about minimizing the gloom of the week ahead, either. Having something to look forward to gives you something pleasing to think about, rather than only focusing on the anxiety you feel. 39 Instead of focusing on the awful things you expect from the week, build excitement over a lunch date with a friend.

Make Sunday nights about doing something for yourself to reduce your anxiety about Monday. Plan some favorite foods to enjoy or go all in for some self-care. 40 Do your best to honor this time and make Sunday night all about you—leave the work emails for Monday morning.

- A. It's a form of shifting your thoughts.
- B. This is an opportunity to give yourself a refreshing time.
- C. Try to figure out what's really causing you to fear the week.
- D. It doesn't mean you have to shift your thoughts to something fun.
- E. But even though the Sunday scaries are common, they are manageable.
- F. It can be whatever feels like a helpful distraction to relieve from the stress.
- G. Instead of sitting on the sofa and watching the clock, do something that you enjoy.

第四部分 写作 (共两节, 满分 40 分) 第一节 (满分 15 分)

学校英文报正在开展以“How would you use your smart phone?”为题的讨论。请使用图表中的调查结果写一篇短文投稿, 内容包括:

1. 调查结果的描述;
2. 简单评论;
3. 你的建议。注意:

1. 词数 80 左右;
2. 短文的题目和首句已为你写好。

How would you use the smart phone?

A survey on how students would use the smart phone has been conducted recently.

第二节 (满分 25 分) 阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。

Police Outpost Lake is as far south as you can go in Canada. In fact, next to the lake are the protected wetlands, where songbirds, ducks, and Canada geese glided by on the breeze, touching down briefly on the water's surface before flapping(振翅) their way back up into the sky.

Standing at the lake's edge, my cousin, Allan, and I cast our fishing lines separately onto the smooth-as-glass water. Down the shoreline was Allan's father, my uncle Rick. He liked to fish alone, away from distractions, noise, and other people.

Allan shouted, "Dad, where should I stand?"

Uncle Rick pressed his finger to his lips, pointed to a shady spot by a large rock where he had cast his line and shook his head gently.

"He wants us to be quiet or else we won't catch any fish." I whispered.

"Why do I have to be so quiet?" asked Allan. "All those birds are making more noise than I ever could!"

I ignored him, pulling back on my rod gently and squinting into the glare of the sun. Out of the corner of my eye, I caught a glimpse of a few great northern loons(潜鸟) gathering together not far from the shoreline. What were they doing there? Loons usually travel alone, but here were five of them in a cluster. Maybe it was a family? Just then one loon, making a loud painful cry, swam away from the group, toward me.

“Allan! Come here. Now!”

Allan laid his fishing rod down on the dirty sand, darting toward me.

“Come here. Take a look at that loon. It’s swimming toward us, not far away from us. It’s trying to get our attention.”

The loon finally stopped in the shallow water near shore, not ten feet away from us. It was so close that we could see its round red eyes. Strangely, the bird’s wings were held tight against its body.

Wading into the water and getting closer to the loon, we both saw a fishing line wrapped tightly around its neck and a shiny red hook(鱼钩) in its body. Left like this, the loon couldn’t fly or fish or survive. It was asking us to help!

注意:

1. 续写词数应为 150 词左右;
2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

“Go fetch the scissors from the fishing box,” I urged Allan.

As I set down the loon on the water, it joyfully flapped its wings.
