My father always told me: "All work is noble." He wasn't 11 , but he earned a reasonable living. Thanks to his 12 , I was able to go to Art College. I, however, wanted to do something 13 , something more interesting-I was special!

After graduation, I moved to New York in search of a graphic designer job. It was winter and, ever the optimist, I'd only brought enough money to 14 myself for about a month. I wasn't 15 -I was sure I'd find a fantastic job immediately.

Within a few weeks, though, I found myself wandering around the streets having been 16 by every design office in town. My hostel 17 was almost gone and I hadn't eaten in days. "How had I reached this point? "I wondered as I 18 in my thin jacket.

I was just about to 19 when my dad called. He suggested that I get a job in a 20 until something else came along. At first, pride made me 21. But I was cold, hungry, and unwilling to go home feeling 22 and defeated.

I entered an expensive-looking cafe near one of the design offices that had turned me away and asked the manager if they were 23. She said they were 24, and offered me a job right away.

25 , I found that I really enjoyed serving people. I started making big 26 right away. Later, the manager learned that I had a design 27 and asked me to design the cafe menus. That led to a part-time job at an advertising company.

Previously, I'd have never considered being a 28, but there I was. I 29 got my dream design job, but that winter I learned not to make 30 about work.

B

When I was about 5 years old, I experienced my very first random act of kindness. I was sitting at the roadside one evening, crying alone for some reason when suddenly, a boy came up to me and gave me a plastic rose. I remember the moment when I took the rose from his hand; I was smiling from ear to ear, whispering "I want to be like him" to myself as I watched him walking away.

From then on, I made it as my life mission to do random acts of kindness whenever I can. I was very determined to make other people smile. That was the only reason why I joined my school's Red Crescent Society and became a volunteer. Unfortunately, not everyone thinks in the same way as I did. Whenever I do something nice to others, people around me will start to judge my actions. Often I will just keep quiet and ignore what they say, but every once in a while, they do drive me up the wall.

These people like to complain about how humans nowadays are lacking of humanities and compassion. However, when they actually see somebody doing a good deed in front of them, they start to question and criticize that person's honesty. Perhaps it is the increasing crime rate and the never-ending rat race that caused them to be so suspicious to nice strangers. In other words, people nowadays have lost sight of the real meaning of kindness and just let it go unnoticed. That is why I think random acts of kindness are really important. These selfless acts are not only capable of bringing joy to the recipients but also to the givers. Because of this, I want to help spread the idea of these random acts to the whole world. I want to show the people how the little things they give could make a big difference in someone else's life.

An exciting landing process of Chang'e-4 lunar probe (月球探测器) was seen through the monitor at Beijing Aerospace Control Center in Beijing, Jan. 3, 2019. It touched down on the far side of the moon at 10:26 a.m. Beijing Time, becoming the first spacecraft soft-landing on the moon's unknown side never visible from Earth.

China's Chang'e-4 probe has started the exploration on the far side of the moon thanks to the relay satellite that provides a communication link with ground control. The relay satellite, named Queqiao, meaning Magpie Bridge, after a Chinese legend (传说), was launched on May 21, 2018, and became the first communication satellite operating in the halo orbit, nearly 500,000 km from the earth. It can also provide communication for probes from other countries. The relay satellite will also be used for scientific and technological experiments. The maximum distance between the satellite and the Chang'e-4 probe on the far side of the moon is 79,000 km. The satellite processes data from the probe and sends it to Earth.

The satellite can stay in its orbit for a long time due to its relatively low fuel consumption, as the earth's and moon's gravity balances its orbital moving. While in orbit, it can see both the earth and the far side of the moon.

The concept of using a relay satellite in the halo orbit was first put forward by U.S. space experts in the 1960s, but was realized by Chinese space engineers.

Researchers hope to use the cameras on the satellite to record asteroids (小行星) hitting the far side of the moon. To control the cost of the Chang'e-4 probe, the relay satellite was designed to be relatively small, weighing about 400 kg.

Researchers had just 30 months to develop the satellite, putting them under high pressure. To promote public interest in space exploration, the China National Space Administration invited people to write down their wishes for lunar and space exploration, and the relay satellite carries the names of tens of thousands of participants and their messages.

42. What do we learn from the second paragraph?

- A. The relay satellite was launched on Jan. 3, 2019.
- B. Chang'e-4 probe was the first communication satellite.
- C. The relay satellite only explores the far side of the moon.
- D. The relay satellite can handle data from Chang'e-4 probe.

43. Why was the size of the relay satellite relatively small?

- A. To reduce the cost as much as possible.
- B. To make it circle Moon for a longer time.
- C. To avoid being crashed by other satellites.
- D. To follow American space experts' advice.

44. What made researchers suffer from great stress?

- A. Few people interested in the exploration on the moon.
- B. The relay satellite carrying too much equipment.
- C. Their lacking enough time to develop the relay satellite.
- D. People's never being optimistic about the relay satellite.

45. What is the main idea of the text?

- A. China is a new space power after the USA.
- B. Chang'e-4 probe lands on Moon's far side.

C. Chinese space engineers make much progress.

D. Space exploration is a dangerous challenge.

the same time, it can be will make your decision

第二节（共5小题；每小题2分，共10分）

根据短文内容，从短文后的七个选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Whether in your life or work, the following things are not the reasons for you to feel embarrassed. It's OK and just move on.

1. Mistakes while learning

There will be times when you have people above you(a boss) or even next to you(a coworker) that will get really annoyed with you for "ruining" something "important". 46 Even if you make mistakes and get a punishment, persevere and push on. You do not need to be embarrassed for learning from your mistakes.

2, Food choices

People are different and have different taste buds (味蕾). Whether it is healthy or not, food is a choice and it is part of life. 47 You do not need to be embarrassed for food you do or do not like. Tell them, "It is a personal choice I have made, and I am committed to it."

3. Your past

Allowing positive experiences to define, limit, improve, and outshine (凸显) you may cause you to be caught up in the past and unable to truly live in the present. Whether your history is positive, negative, or somewhere in between, don't hold on to the negative experiences and let it reflect your current behavior, 48

4. The clean lines of your car / home / workspace

When everyone gets in the car, you realize your Starbucks bags are still on the floor. So what? Think about it this way: everyone has a "messy" aspect of their life. Maybe their home is completely clean, but the relationship with their spouse (配偶) is messy. Someone's car gets washed once a week, but his/her work life could use some help. 49 We don't apologize to others about our personal limitations. By being outwardly embarrassed, it only brings more attention to the fact!

5. Putting yourself first

If you find yourself saying no to something or making up lies to get out of it, tell them the truth, and don't apologize. You will feel much better in the long run if you are honest with them and yourself. If you're not up to a voluntary duty, you don't have to be. You can politely refuse the person's request.

50 Put yourself first.

- A. It is simply a personal choice that people make for their own reasons.
- B. It is okay to be selfish from time to time.
- C. Errors are bound to happen when you have on your training wheels.
- D. Each of them waits for your immediate help.
- E. Let bygones(过去的事) be bygones.
- F. Forgetting history means betrayal.
- G. No one on Earth lives a perfectly "clean" life in every aspect.

第三部分：书面表达(共两节，35分)

第一节 (15分)

假如你是李华，是某校高三学生。请你根据下面所给的提示，给校报“英语角”栏目写一封英语倡议信，呼吁大家合理使用共享单车，爱护共享单车。

书面表达：第一节（15分）

One possible version:

Dear fellow students,

I'm Li Hua, a Senior Three student. I'm appealing to you to focus more attention on shared bikes, of which the popularity has been increasing.

Benefits of shared bikes riding are obvious: they never produce pollution, thus encouraging low-carbon lifestyle. Convenience is also why people are in favor of it. Additionally, public bikes are almost free of charge while other forms, taxis, for example, are quite expensive.

But still, problems cannot be overlooked. The main concern is that random parking frequently bothers others a lot. Worst of all, bikes of this kind are left damaged for unknown reasons.

So, considerate parking is what enables everybody to enjoy the public facility. And please keep in mind that when using them, one should take good care of shared bikes rather than destroying the properties. A small action can make a huge difference. Everybody counts!

Yours sincerely,

Li Hua

四、Possible version:

Last week, a special guest was invited to our annual school art festival. He was an elderly man we would see playing the erhu near our school every day. His melody was incredibly beautiful, but couldn't get any attention from the rush-hour passers-by. It was a pity. How amazing it would be if his music could be appreciated!

There came a chance. When discussing what to present in our art festival, we all agreed to invite him to join us. Receiving our invitation, he could hardly hide his excitement and eagerness. We were all expecting his stage performance.

The big day finally arrived. When he played under the spotlights, all of us were mesmerized by his gorgeous music. As he finished, thunderous applause echoed around the auditorium. Wearing a broad smile, he repeatedly expressed his gratitude for being offered a stage to show his talent.

From this experience, I learned that, to the people like the elderly man what really matters is not sympathy but more attention or appreciation, which will bring them love and warmth and brighten their lives.
