Dear Kelly,

Learning that you are interested in Multicultural Day that took place in our school last Friday, I'm willing to share with you some of the shining moments.

The Day started five years ago and annually it takes place on 22 October. Meant to help students better understand and learn to tolerate different cultures, various activities are organized the highlight of which was the theme lecture delivered by a cross-culture scholar, deepening our insight into the cultural diversity. Also worthy of note was the live performance displaying distinctive qualities of each culture.

The event was really a cultural feast and eye-opener. To learn more, come to next year's Multicultural Day here!

Yours,

I knocked on his door, sat down in his living room, and asked, “Can I adopt you as my grandpa?” Bill stood frozen for a little while before a broad smile came across his face. Then I saw tears in his eyes. He wrapped me in his arms and buried his face in my coat to hide his tears, his voice trembling, “Of course, sweetheart! I’m so happy to be your grandpa!” Soon after, Bill printed out an adoption certificate and hung it on the wall of “my” room. Gazing at the snow outside, Bill said to me excitedly, “It’s time to learn how to drive a lawn tractor.”

The next morning, while learning to drive the lawn tractor with a snowplow, I accidentally plowed down our chain-link fence. I was almost frightened to tears, but Bill just chuckled in his laid-back way and comforted me, “Don’t worry, Grandson. I have already planned to change a fence.” We eventually replaced it with a nice, tall wooden fence. My dad and Bill installed it together. What impressed me most was that there was a door on the fence, which definitely strengthened our connection. Underneath, I knew that we were a true family now.

W: The hat is really beautiful. Did you make it by yourself?

M: I’m glad you like it. I learned to make hats from my father.

Text 2

W: Bob, have you seen Tom? The teacher is coming.

M: We were talking about our trip to the elderly house in the dormitory, but he was suddenly called by the headmaster.

Text 3

M: $15.99 for the vase is too expensive. I will pay only $10 for it.

W: Done, sir. It’s yours for $ 10.

Text 4

M: Hello, I made an appointment on Thursday with Dr. Smith, but I can’t make it because of an important meeting. I’m calling to ask you to rearrange it for next Friday. Is it OK?

W: OK. I am writing you down for that time.

Text 5

M: I hear that Jack is planning to work in the USA.

W: Really? Believe me! I’ll try to talk him out of it.

Text 6

W: Mario, could you share Taylor Swift’s new song with me?

M: I suggest you search for the song by yourself, because you have to pay if you want to listen.

W: That’s really annoying.

M: It’s true but singers earn their bread from it.

W: Fine. I hope it is worth the price. But I fail to find it on NetEase Music or Kuwo Music. What’s wrong?

M: It is only available on QQ Music at present. It takes time for you to download it.

M: I can't believe this. I have been on the phone with my bank all day and they still haven't fixed my problem.

W: Is it a credit card problem?

M: Yes. My credit card information was stolen. When I got my bill in the mail, I saw there were many unfamiliar purchases on it.

W: That's terrible.

M: I am very upset because the bank is not helping me quickly. I have talked to many different managers already.

W: Doesn't the bank's owner need to make the decision to give you your money back?

M: No. I just have to prove that these purchases were not made by me. I think the person who stole my information got it from the Internet.

W: You can never be too careful.

Text 8

W: You look troubled. What's the matter?

M: I have a big decision to make. My best friend Carl offered me a job as the leading engineer at his garage and with good pay.

W: That's wonderful. But doesn't it mean you're going to quit college?

M: I don't know. One side of me says go ahead, you can go back to college anytime. And the other side says not so fast. For all those years in the army, you planned to go to college.

W: It's true that with your experience in the army you could do a good job repairing cars. But it would be a pity if you gave up your college. I'm sure you will get better jobs with a college degree.

Text 9

M: Where do you get your idea from, Mrs. Rowling?

W: I was traveling on a train between Manchester and London, and it just popped into my head. By the time I got off at King's Cross, many of the characters in the books had already been invented.

M: Are any of the characters in the books based on real people?

W: Hermione Granger is a little bit like I was at her age, though I was neither as clever nor as annoying. Ron is a little bit like my best friend and Professor Snape is a lot like one of my old teachers.

M: How long have you been writing?

W: Nearly all my life. I had written two novels before I had the idea for Harry Potter.

M: Did you expect the Harry Potter books to be so successful?

W: Never. I didn't expect lots of people to like them. In fact, I never really thought much apart from getting them published.

M: Any clues about the next book?

W: The books are getting darker... Harry Potter's going to have quite a bit to deal with as he gets older. Sorry if they get too scary!

M: Thanks for your time.

W: You're welcome.

Hello and good morning! Well, we're off to a good start in the south this week, as most of the rain from the weekend has disappeared—just a few patches of cloud and maybe some showers here on the east coast. They'll all clear up by lunchtime, though. Over the next day or so, London and the area around Kent can expect a couple of isolated showers, but mostly dry through until Thursday.

By the weekend, unfortunately, the dry weather will make way for mostly cloudy skies and rain. The rain will move from Scotland, down towards the north and reach the south coast by Saturday afternoon. Temperatures, at least, will stay mostly warm at around 21 degrees for the weekend. It might feel like a nice change from the high twenties and early thirties we'll see in the week. That's all from me until tomorrow. Enjoy the mini-heatwave while you can!
