1) Perhaps thousands of people have searched for a bronze chest full of gold and jewels hidden in the Rocky Mountains between Santa Fe and the Canadian border hidden by a millionaire adventurer. At least four people died in their search for the treasure.

2) But it's all over now. Fenn's Treasure has been found. The 89-year-old adventurer named Forrest Fenn, who created the treasure hunt, announced the news on his website. "I don't know the person who found it, but the poem in my book led him to the precise spot," Fenn wrote. "The treasure was confirmed by a photograph the lucky finder sent me."

3) Forrest Fenn, the man who started the hunt, lives in Santa Fe. He was a pilot in the Vietnam War and later accumulated his wealth as a dealer in art and antiques. Fenn was diagnosed (诊断) with cancer in 1988 and had planned to die peacefully in the woods with his treasure. (But when his cancer became less serious) he changed his plan, eventually writing the poem that described his dream resting place, which is where he hid the treasure. The poem appeared in a memoir called The Thrill of the Chase. Fenn said that the chest wouldn't be found by accident; only a treasure hunter who correctly interpreted the clues (线索) would find it.

4) Several treasure hunters went missing while attempting to find the chest, including hunter Jeff Murphy and Mike Petersen, both of whom went missing in Yellowstone National Park in 2017. Fenn said that he had never been to the Yellowstone National Park, and that the treasure was not in a dangerous place. "It was in the thick forest of the Rocky Mountains and had not been moved from the spot where I hid it more than 10 years ago," Fenn wrote on his website. It is illegal to remove anything from a national park, which would cause

Beethoven is a giant of Western music. His influence comes to piano compositions. That's according to a study in the journal PLoS One.

If you're wondering how data analysis could determine something as abstract as influence, it's worth remembering this: "Music is the most information-rich of all human activities, of which is symbolic. The music is written in symbols that are interpreted by the brain."

Juyong Park is a theoretical physicist in South Korea. He analyzed 100 piano compositions by 10 composers from 1700 to 1900. Then they used their mathematical quality to their advantage by dividing each composition into what they called "chord words", in other words, a chord (和弦). They then compared each chord with the chord that came after it, which allowed them to determine how creative composers were at coming up with novel transitions (变调).

The composer with top marks for novelty was Rachmaninoff. But when the researchers looked at these chord transitions across all 10 composers, it was Beethoven who was most heavily borrowed from, meaning at least among the composers in this analysis, his style was the largest.

Their study comes with some drawbacks. For example, the researchers only analyzed piano compositions in this work, and by only studying chord transitions, so their conclusions wouldn't relate to artists who were influential in other ways like Ludwig van Beethoven. Park explained, "It's well understood that Mozart's contribution to music comes from the unique factors that he designed. That was not very well reflected by our machine learning."

As for Park, the results convinced him he has some listening to do. "I have listened to more than Rachmaninoff. So after this work comes out, I want to buy the whole Beethoven collection."

32. What makes it possible to determine musical influence?
- A. The symbolic nature of music.      B. The analyzed formulas of piano music.
C. The abstract feature of culture.      D. The rapid development of machine learning.
33. Who is the most creative composer in the study?
- A. Rachmaninoff.      B. Beethoven.      C. Mozart.      D. Schubert.
34. Why did Park make the explanation in paragraph 7?
- A. To express his admiration for Mozart.
B. To compare Mozart with other musicians.

- C. To introduce a way to design musical forms.
  - D. To show certain limitations of the study.
35. Which of the following can be the best title of this text? D
- A. Beethoven: a Genius in Classical Music
  - B. Beethoven's Influence: Proved by Science
  - C. Chords: a New Way to Determine Music
  - D. The Art Form of Music: Written in Symbols

第二节 (共5小题;每小题2分,满分10分)

根据短文内容,从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Dangerous Driving Habits

Approximately 1.3 million people around the world die in road accidents every year, making it one of the top ten causes of deaths. 36 To prevent these consequences, here are some dangerous driving habits you should avoid.

(A) B 37 Were you actually surprised by this one? Here's the truth—you're 23 times more likely to crash if you text while driving. 38 Disturbingly, 77 percent of young adult drivers say they can safely drive while texting. Actually, distracted driving accidents, including those caused by the use of handheld devices, form the No. 1 killer of teens, according to the NHTSA and others.

Drive when you're tired. Avoid driving when you're tired, since you will have slower reaction times and you are very likely to fall asleep at the wheel. If you're exhausted and your body needs sleep, it is going to get it, one way or another. 39 If you're already in the car, pull over and take a nap and then continue when you've woken up. Having someone with you in the car can help prevent accidents, since you are more likely to be alert if you have company.

Keep an eye on the kids. According to the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, passengers are ranked by drivers as among the most frequent causes of distraction (分心). Young children are four times as distracting as adults, while infants can be eight times more distracting, the AAA Foundation reports. 40

- A. Talk on the phone.
- B. Text and update social media.
- C. Therefore, keep an eye on the kids if you drive fast.
- D. It takes about five seconds of attention to send a brief text.
- E. If you're very tired, avoid driving home and take a cab instead.
- F. So think twice before glancing at your little one at the backseat.
- G. Another 20-50 million people are injured due to road accidents every year.

parents D I should pick a proper time to visit her in New York.

Three weekends were possible for me to make a 4C in the coming months: October 20th, November 10th, or December 1st. The 4D in October was certainly the least convenient as I was pretty 49A, and I'd have to get all the arrangements in order very 50A. But I chose it because if I waited just out of 51A, and Nonie died before I saw her, I'd never 52D myself. It turns out I did the 53A thing. When her driver came to pick her up today around noon, Nonie 54D passed out, and never 54D.

My trip was a 55D one, but I got to spend a full day and a half 56C next to her and asking her questions. Some questions got more 57B answers. I wanted to know more about her and my grandpa's love story and how they can stay happily 58A for nearly 70 years, dedicated to each other until the very end.

My grandpa got dementia(痴呆), and he almost 59B everything slowly. 60D, for years he still remembered Nonie. He died two years ago, and Nonie told me she'd been asking the Lord to take her ever since.

第二节

One possible version:

Ladies and gentlemen,

At a young age, I repeatedly heard a sentence from my grandparents: "Honesty is the best policy." I didn't truly understand it until I was nine, when I broke a window of my class after school. As no one saw it, I happily told my family about my "good luck". My father seriously said to me, "You know our family motto: Honesty is the best policy. You broke the window, and you should be responsible for it." The next day, I apologized to my teacher, who, instead of blaming me, praised me for my honesty.

Be honest, and you'll benefit from it!

Thank you for your listening!
