Steven Brown was 85 years old. He became well-known last September after his son Edward had recorded his two-minute piece from four notes — F natural, A, D, and B natural — and posted it on Twitter.

Edward posted the piece online to show how musical ability can survive memory loss and Steven won the hearts of the British nation when he played the piano from his home in Sussex live on the television.

To mark a year since he played his composition, Steven was invited to conduct the BBC Philharmonic orchestra (管弦乐队) playing two of his compositions at the studio in Salford. He spent an emotional afternoon with the orchestra, during which he conducted both Four Notes, while his son Edward played the piano, and an older composition of his called Where's the Sunshine.

Steven, a former music teacher and classical pianist, said, "It was magical, and it was very, very special to work with such wonderful musicians. It made me feel alive. I couldn't believe that an orchestra was playing my music and I was standing in front of it conducting them."

Five years ago, Steven moved into sheltered accommodation as part of his dementia (痴呆症) care.

Edward joined Steven on the trip organized by Music For Dementia and had seen his dad "come alive again" since the video of him playing piano went online.

Edward said, "His short-term memory is generally shot to pieces but when big events like this happen it's like a branding iron on his brain. From my experience with dad, the right piece of music at the right time can be absolutely incredible. For the first time in years he has got active again. It really brought him back to life again."

Campaign Director at Music for Dementia, Grace Meadows said, "Seeing Steven performing beyond his dementia and having the contact with the musicians was a wonderful thing. It was very emotional."

24. What's the reason for Steven's popularity?

A. He recorded a musical.

B. He starred in a famous movie.

C. He played the piano in a video.

D. He had extraordinary memory for music.

25. Steven was invited to perform his work_____.

D. to celebrate the first anniversary of his online video

26. What does his son say about Steven's experience?

A. More videos should be taken for the elderly.

B. Playing the piano can cure many diseases.

C. The impact of the right music is huge.

D. Short-term memory is changeable.

Telling a yellow taxi and a pair of binoculars (望远镜) apart is so easy that most people could do it standing on their head. Not so for an artificial intelligence: make the cab upside down and it sees binoculars.

This is just one of dozens of examples that show AI is a lot worse at identifying objects by sight than many people realise.

The examples, given by Anh Nguyen at Auburn University in Alabama, raise concerns about the real-world ability of image-recognition systems, for example in driverless cars. "It's a huge problem," says Nguyen.

We already know AIs are often flummoxed by some pictures that humans can recognize without any problem—such as a turtle with a special shell pattern that an AI misidentifies as a gun.

But do AIs have problems in the real world? Nguyen and his colleagues took images of common objects from ImageNet—a database used to train AIs—and randomly rotated and changed the position of the objects in the pictures. They found this was enough to confuse several state-of-the-art image-recognition systems, including Google's, 97 per cent of the time, averaged across all of the systems.

In one case, a school bus that was correctly identified in the original image was misidentified as a punching bag when shown in close-up, and as a snow plough when upside down in the road.

"It shows these systems aren't as intelligent as many people think they are and raises important questions about how safely they can be used in certain applications," says Jeff Clune at Uber AI Labs in San Francisco.

Nguyen worries what could happen in chaotic situations such as airports, where AI-based airport security scanners need to be able to identify objects in bags from multiple angles.

There are big implications for driverless cars as well. It makes sense for a vehicle to avoid any object it can't recognise. But if a car slams on its brakes because it thinks a Coke can is a fire engine this could be as dangerous as thinking a fire engine is a Coke can and doing nothing. "This is one reason why driverless cars will need to have multiple sensors to fall back on," says Nguyen.

He, Clune and others have been uncovering these problems for the past few years, but nobody knows how to fix them. The biggest barrier to progress is that when an AI looks at an image, it can't extract rules about the object that would help it identify a similar one next time—for example, the rule that horses have four legs. “To reach a human level of reasoning, we need a way to extract rules from images,” says Nguyen.

27. The underlined word “flummoxed” in Paragraph 4 is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. confused
B. preferred
C. criticized
D. applauded

28. In Paragraph 6, the example of a school bus is used to _____.

- A. prove that human beings are much smarter than AI systems
B. illustrate AI recognition systems are not as intelligent as you think
C. arouse people’s concerns about the safety of AI recognition systems
D. show school buses can have different forms when seen from different angles

29. What can we infer from the last paragraph?

- A. The biggest obstacle to progress is that AI can’t analyze images from previous experiences.
B. AI has not possessed the ability to distinguish things that look similar to each other.
C. The reason why AI can’t tell a horse and a car apart is that they both have four legs.
D. Developing reasoning in AI is the biggest challenge AI researchers face.

30. Which is the best title for this passage?

- A. Puzzles remain to be solved
B. AI is not cleverer than human beings
C. AI recognition system needs improving
D. AI can't see things from another view

Does Chinese philosophy influence your parenting? It is the question I am most often asked. Chinese philosophy contains many lessons that are useful, accessible and timely when applied to the challenges of parenting. Confucianism and Daoism suggest ways to guide your children toward meaning and fulfilment rather than wealth and fame.

Parenting is tough, especially because there isn’t a one-size-fits-all approach. Different kids need different things. How do we stay focused on what matters most? How do we navigate difficult times with our kids and support them when they struggle? All of us want our children to be successful, partly because we love them and want them to be happy. But it is easy to mistake “success” with certain kinds of academic or athletic achievements.

Of course, one can define success in this way. But ancient Chinese philosophers believed that real success is not measured by fame, money or power. A successful life is one in which a person flourishes: they are happy, fulfilled, and they find meaning in what they do and who they are. This type of fulfilment comes from loving and being loved by others within the context of meaningful, lasting relationships; giving generously of what you have to others; caring for and having a genuine love of nature; and shouldering your responsibility.

Most of us know that having an Ivy League degree and a high-paying job is not going to make our children happy and fulfilled in life. Yet we worry about how they will find things they love to do and that they are good at. Philosophers from the two most influential ancient Chinese traditions — Confucianism and Daoism — talk more about human flourishing, virtue, happiness and fulfilment than about “success”.

Chinese philosophers argued that we genuinely flourish — are happiest and most fulfilled — when we develop these virtues. This can never be measured in terms such as earning power, entering famous schools or getting jobs. Instead, it is measured in how we treat people — how one loves and is loved by one’s family and friends — and in what one does to make the world a kinder, gentler, more humane and beautiful place. They encourage us to help our children learn more about the world around them.

The Confucians and Daoists were a little like yin and yang: Confucians have a lot of active, hands-on ways to help children grow, such as participating in traditions, while the Daoists recommend simpler activities, such as exploring the beauty of nature. Their diverse views on living a good life are precisely what makes Chinese philosophy such a great resource for parents.

Parenting is messy. It is not simple or straightforward but complex and difficult. There are no magic solutions that make things easy or smooth. Most of us will need to piece together different approaches in order to find something that works well and feels right in different situations, for different children, and at different times in a child's life.

31. According to the author, parenting is challenging because_____.
- A. Parents don't know what success refers to
B. Children don't believe in Chinese philosophy
C. There are many theories of parenting to choose
D. One can't find a standard approach to suit every child
32. What is the opinion of ancient Chinese philosophers?
- A. People who flourish can feel successful because they live a meaningful life.
B. Only when people make contribution to society can they feel successful.
C. A successful life can be measured by reputation and wealth.
D. Success just means one should be friendly to nature.
33. What can we infer from this passage?
- A. Confucians think graduating from famous university can make children intelligent and fulfilled.
B. Daoists are more influential than Confucians because of their simpler activities.
C. Confucians and Daoists together can provide parents abundant resources.
D. It is enough for parents to just learn Chinese Philosophy well.
34. What's the author's attitude towards adopting Chinese Philosophy to parenting?
- A. Critical .
B. Objective.
C. Indifferent.
D. Suspicious.

Kids Do More Sports After Tutoring Ban

China Central Television reported that 33,000 arts and sports stores were launched in just over a month after the government published its "Double Reduction" document in late July. _____ 35 _____

The government tutoring restriction is supposed to help improve the health of young people. Some China's school children are short-sighted and nearly one in five between the ages of 6-17 is overweight or obese, National Health Commission data show. _____ 36 _____ The government has also promised to "gradually increase" the score of sports in the senior high school entrance exam.

Schools are taking action to provide a variety of PE classes and clubs for children. Some schools are providing ice and snow sports optional courses for students. _____ 37 _____ Every Wednesday afternoon children wearing boxing gloves and shin guards sweat in the club as they punch and kick pads held by teachers in a school in east Beijing. It has been teaching children martial arts such as Thai boxing since 2018. Now it has provided regular classes such as wrestling, swimming and skating.

38 Sitting on a couch in the reception area in a public park, Mr. Liu waits for her seven-year-old son when his son is playing basketball with classmates. A 39-year-old mother, who accompanies her son to the park nearby jogging every Sunday after his son finishes homework shortly after the company that provided his math tuition was shut down. "My son and I can jog three times a week unless he's sick," she said. And she thinks it is beneficial to their health and gives her more time to communicate with her child.

Parents hold positive attitudes towards the new policy. China's Tiger moms used to find classes after school to give our children an advantage in the intensely competitive education. 39 They believe children can't be too weak if the nation has a strong desire to be strong. Children will be more and more strong both physically and mentally to adapt to their future study and career.

- A. But now they aren't enrolling their children just to give them something to do.
- B. The Double Reduction policy also gives students time for exercise after school.
- C. Some children are addicted to the video games and have no time to do homework.
- D. Parents are busy enrolling their children to all kinds of classes after school to improve their scores.
- E. So the government plans to get almost 20 million more people to participate in regular exercises within five years.
- F. Some schools are organizing a variety of sports games like rope-skipping game, basketball, badminton, volleyball game and so on.
- G. It banned academic tutoring during weekends and holidays and ordered schools to reduce both the amount and time needed for assignments.

第三部分 书面表达（共两节，32分）

第一节（共4小题；第40、41题各2分，第42题3分，第43题5分，共12分）

阅读下面短文，根据题目要求用英文回答问题。

Your Food Choices Affect the Earth's Climate

Every action has a cost, even for growing food and delivering it to your dinner plate. A team of researchers has found that meat production releases more climate-warming pollution than it does when producing fruits, vegetables, nuts and grains. Their calculations suggest that people could do a lot to slow global warming if they limited the amount of meat they eat.

There are plenty of "costs" of food. As to the visible costs, people pay money for the food as well as the fuel needed to get groceries to the store or restaurant. And there are less-visible "costs" of food as well. Producing foods takes resources, for example, the water used to irrigate (灌溉) crop fields or the fertilizer and chemicals used to promote plant growth and fight pests.

Peter Scarborough at the University of Oxford in England decided to calculate some of the less-visible pollution created by food production. His team focused on greenhouse gases emitted through the production of our food, including carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>), methane (甲烷) and the nitrous oxide (氧化亚氮). All three gases are powerful in warming the earth's atmosphere.

They conducted a series of experiments and fed the data collected into a computer and then included the amount of greenhouse gases linked with producing nearly 100 common foods. Then the computer matched those greenhouse-gas amounts to the mix of foods each person had reported eating.

It shows that the diet of someone whose meals included an average of 50 to 99 grams of meat each day would be responsible for the daily release of 5.6 kilograms of CO<sub>2</sub> equivalent (等量) while those vegans had the lowest diet-linked greenhouse-gas emissions (2.9 kg of CO<sub>2</sub> equivalent).

It is concluded that reducing the intake of meat and other animal-based products can make a valuable contribution to climate change reduction. And compared to meat, more plant-based food can be grown on more lands with less water and other resources. In places where many people are going hungry, raising animals for meat may make it harder to ensure that everyone gets enough to eat.

40. What do the researchers' calculations suggest?

41. Why does the author say there are also less-visible "costs" of food?

42. Please decide which part is false in the following statement, then underline it and explain why.

Although plant-based food is harder to adapt to more types of lands than meat, it has a lower requirement of water and other resources.

43. Apart from food choices, what can you do to protect the environment? (In about 40 words)

Steven Brown was 85 years old. He became well-known last September after his son Edward had recorded his two-minute piece from four notes — F natural, A, D, and B natural — and posted it on Twitter.

Edward posted the piece online to show how musical ability can survive memory loss and Steven won the hearts of the British nation when he played the piano from his home in Sussex live on the television.

To mark a year since he played his composition, Steven was invited to conduct the BBC Philharmonic orchestra (管弦乐队) playing two of his compositions at the studio in Salford. He spent an emotional afternoon with the orchestra, during which he conducted both Four Notes, while his son Edward played the piano, and an older composition of his called Where's the Sunshine.

Steven, a former music teacher and classical pianist, said, “It was magical, and it was very, very special to work with such wonderful musicians. It made me feel alive. I couldn't believe that an orchestra was playing my music and I was standing in front of it conducting them.”

Five years ago, Steven moved into sheltered accommodation as part of his dementia (痴呆症) care.

Edward joined Steven on the trip organized by Music For Dementia and had seen his dad “come alive again” since the video of him playing piano went online.

Edward said, “His short-term memory is generally shot to pieces but when big events like this happen it’s like a branding iron on his brain. From my experience with dad, the right piece of music at the right time can be absolutely incredible. For the first time in years he has got active again. It really brought him back to life again.”

Campaign Director at Music for Dementia, Grace Meadows said, “Seeing Steven performing beyond his dementia and having the contact with the musicians was a wonderful thing. It was very emotional.”

24. What’s the reason for Steven’s popularity?

- A. He recorded a musical.
- B. He starred in a famous movie.
- C. He played the piano in a video.
- D. He had extraordinary memory for music.

25. Steven was invited to perform his work _____.

- A. to show off his musical talent
- B. to work with excellent musicians
- C. to set an example for people with dementia
- D. to celebrate the first anniversary of his online video

- A. More videos should be taken for the elderly.
- B. Playing the piano can cure many diseases.
- C. The impact of the right music is huge.
- D. Short-term memory is changeable.

Telling a yellow taxi and a pair of binoculars (望远镜) apart is so easy that most people could do it standing on their head. Not so for an artificial intelligence: make the cab upside down and it sees binoculars.

This is just one of dozens of examples that show AI is a lot worse at identifying objects by sight than many people realise.

The examples, given by Anh Nguyen at Auburn University in Alabama, raise concerns about the real-world ability of image-recognition systems, for example in driverless cars. "It's a huge problem," says Nguyen.

We already know AIs are often flummoxed by some pictures that humans can recognize without any problem—such as a turtle with a special shell pattern that an AI misidentifies as a gun.

But do AIs have problems in the real world? Nguyen and his colleagues took images of common objects from ImageNet—a database used to train AIs—and randomly rotated and changed the position of the objects in the pictures. They found this was enough to confuse several state-of-the-art image-recognition systems, including Google's, 97 per cent of the time, averaged across all of the systems.

In one case, a school bus that was correctly identified in the original image was misidentified as a punching bag when shown in close-up, and as a snow plough when upside down in the road.

"It shows these systems aren't as intelligent as many people think they are and raises important questions about how safely they can be used in certain applications," says Jeff Clune at Uber AI Labs in San Francisco.

Nguyen worries what could happen in chaotic situations such as airports, where AI-based airport security scanners need to be able to identify objects in bags from multiple angles.

There are big implications for driverless cars as well. It makes sense for a vehicle to avoid any object it can't recognise. But if a car slams on its brakes because it thinks a Coke can is a fire engine this could be as dangerous as thinking a fire engine is a Coke can and doing nothing. "This is one reason why driverless cars will need to have multiple sensors to fall back on," says Nguyen.

He, Clune and others have been uncovering these problems for the past few years, but nobody knows how to fix them. The biggest barrier to progress is that when an AI looks at an image, it can't extract rules about the object that would help it identify a similar one next time—for example, the rule that horses have four legs. "To reach a human level of reasoning, we need a way to extract rules from images," says Nguyen.

27. The underlined word "flummoxed" in Paragraph 4 is closest in meaning to_____.

- A. confused
B. preferred
C. criticized
D. applauded

28. In Paragraph 6, the example of a school bus is used to_____.

- A. prove that human beings are much smarter than AI systems
B. illustrate AI recognition systems are not as intelligent as you think
C. arouse people's concerns about the safety of AI recognition systems
D. show school buses can have different forms when seen from different angles

29. What can we infer from the last paragraph?

- A. The biggest obstacle to progress is that AI can't analyze images from previous experiences.
B. AI has not possessed the ability to distinguish things that look similar to each other.
C. The reason why AI can't tell a horse and a car apart is that they both have four legs.
D. Developing reasoning in AI is the biggest challenge AI researchers face.

30. Which is the best title for this passage?

- A. Puzzles remain to be solved
B. AI is not cleverer than human beings

C. AI recognition system needs improving

D. AI can't see things from another view

【答案】27. A 28. B 29. D 30. D

【解析】

【分析】这是一篇新闻报道。文章主要讲述了鉴于人工智能目前的技术瓶颈，它无法完全做到从另一个角度看待事物，科学家需要解决该技术瓶颈问题。

【27题详解】

词义猜测题。根据第四段的“such as a turtle with a special shell pattern that an AI misidentifies as a gun. (比如一只带有特殊外壳图案的乌龟，被AI误认为是一把枪。)”可知，人工智能可以被一些人类可以毫无问题识别出的图片弄糊涂。因此confuse一词可以解释划线词。故选A。

【28题详解】

推理判断题。根据第六段的“ In one case, a school bus that was correctly identified in the original image was misidentified as a punching bag when shown in close-up, and as a snow plough when upside down in the road. (在一个案例中，一辆在原始图像中被正确识别的校车在近距离显示时被错误地识别为沙袋，而当倒置在路上时被错误地识别为雪梨。)”可知，校车的例子被用来说明人工智能识别系统并没有你想象的那么智能。故选B。

【29题详解】

推理判断题。根据最后一段“ He, Clune and others have been uncovering these problems for the past few years, but nobody knows how to fix them. The biggest barrier to progress is that when an AI looks at an image, it can't extract rules about the object that would help it identify a similar one next time—for example, the rule that horses have four legs. “To reach a human level of reasoning, we need a way to extract rules from images,” says Nguyen. (在过去的几年里，Nguyen、Clune和其他人一直在寻找这些问题的解决途径，但没有人知道如何解决它们。前进的最大障碍是当人工智能查看图像时，它无法提取关于对象的规则以帮助它下次识别类似的对象。例如，马有四条腿的规则。Nguyen说，“为了达到人类的推理水平，我们需要一种从图像中提取规则的方法”。)”可知，从最后一段中可以推断出在人工智能中发展推理是人工智能研究人员面临的最大挑战。故选D。

【30题详解】

标题判断题。通读全文，根据第一段的“Telling a yellow taxi and a pair of binoculars apart is so easy that most people could do it standing on their head. Not so for an artificial intelligence: make the cab upside down and it sees binoculars. (分辨一辆黄色出租车和一副望远镜是那么的容易，大多数人都可以很容易做得到。对于人工智能来说并非如此：把车倒过来，它看到的是望远镜。)”和上一题的分析可知，人工智能无法从另一个角度看待事物。因此D项“人工智能不能从另一个角度看事物”可以作为文章标题。故选D。

Does Chinese philosophy influence your parenting? It is the question I am most often asked. Chinese philosophy contains many lessons that are useful, accessible and timely when applied to the challenges of parenting. Confucianism and Daoism suggest ways to guide your children toward meaning and fulfilment rather than wealth and fame.

Parenting is tough, especially because there isn't a one-size-fits-all approach. Different kids need different things. How do we stay focused on what matters most? How do we navigate difficult times with our kids and support them when they struggle? All of us want our children to be successful, partly because we love them and want them to be happy. But it is easy to mistake “success” with certain kinds of academic or athletic achievements.

Of course, one can define success in this way. But ancient Chinese philosophers believed that real success is not measured by fame, money or power. A successful life is one in which a person flourishes: they are happy, fulfilled, and they find meaning in what they do and who they are. This type of fulfilment comes from loving and being loved by others within the context of meaningful, lasting relationships; giving generously of what you have to others; caring for and having a genuine love of nature; and shouldering your responsibility.

Most of us know that having an Ivy League degree and a high-paying job is not going to make our children happy and fulfilled in life. Yet we worry about how they will find things they love to do and that they are good at. Philosophers from the two most influential ancient Chinese traditions — Confucianism and Daoism — talk more about human flourishing, virtue, happiness and fulfilment than about “success”.

Chinese philosophers argued that we genuinely flourish — are happiest and most fulfilled — when we develop these virtues. This can never be measured in terms such as earning power, entering famous schools or getting jobs. Instead, it is measured in how we treat people — how one loves and is loved by one’s family and friends — and in what one does to make the world a kinder, gentler, more humane and beautiful place. They encourage us to help our children learn more about the world around them.

The Confucians and Daoists were a little like yin and yang: Confucians have a lot of active, hands-on ways to help children grow, such as participating in traditions, while the Daoists recommend simpler activities, such as exploring the beauty of nature. Their diverse views on living a good life are precisely what makes Chinese philosophy such a great resource for parents.

Parenting is messy. It is not simple or straightforward but complex and difficult. There are no magic solutions that make things easy or smooth. Most of us will need to piece together different approaches in order to find something that works well and feels right in different situations, for different children, and at different times in a child’s life.

31. According to the author, parenting is challenging because_____.

- A. Parents don’t know what success refers to
- B. Children don’t believe in Chinese philosophy
- C. There are many theories of parenting to choose
- D. One can’t find a standard approach to suit every child

32. What is the opinion of ancient Chinese philosophers?

- A. People who flourish can feel successful because they live a meaningful life.
- B. Only when people make contribution to society can they feel successful.
- C. A successful life can be measured by reputation and wealth.
- D. Success just means one should be friendly to nature.

33. What can we infer from this passage?

- A. Confucians think graduating from famous university can make children intelligent and fulfilled.
- B. Daoists are more influential than Confucians because of their simpler activities.
- C. Confucians and Daoists together can provide parents abundant resources.
- D. It is enough for parents to just learn Chinese Philosophy well.

34. What’s the author’s attitude towards adopting Chinese Philosophy to parenting?

- A. Critical .
- B. Objective.
- C. Indifferent.
- D. Suspicious.

Kids Do More Sports After Tutoring Ban

China Central Television reported that 33,000 arts and sports stores were launched in just over a month after the government published its “Double Reduction” document in late July. 35

The government tutoring restriction is supposed to help improve the health of young people. Some China's school children are short-sighted and nearly one in five between the ages of 6-17 is overweight or obese, National Health Commission data show. 36 The government has also promised to “gradually increase” the score of sports in the senior high school entrance exam.

Schools are taking action to provide a variety of PE classes and clubs for children. Some schools are providing ice and snow sports optional courses for students. 37 Every Wednesday afternoon children wearing boxing gloves and shin guards sweat in the club as they punch and kick pads held by teachers in a school in east Beijing. It has been teaching children martial arts such as Thai boxing since 2018. Now it has provided regular classes such as wrestling, swimming and skating.

38 Sitting on a couch in the reception area in a public park, Mr. Liu waits for her seven-year-old son when his son is playing basketball with classmates. A 39-year-old mother, who accompanies her son to the park nearby jogging every Sunday after his son finishes homework shortly after the company that provided his math tuition was shut down. “My son and I can jog three times a week unless he’s sick.” she said. And she thinks it is beneficial to their health and gives her more time to communicate with her child.

Parents hold positive attitudes towards the new policy. China’s Tiger moms used to find classes after school to give our children an advantage in the intensely competitive education. 39 They believe children can’t be too weak if the nation has a strong desire to be strong. Children will be more and more strong both physically and mentally to adapt to their future study and career.

- A. But now they aren’t enrolling their children just to give them something to do.
- B. The Double Reduction policy also gives students time for exercise after school.
- C. Some children are addicted to the video games and have no time to do homework.
- D. Parents are busy enrolling their children to all kinds of classes after school to improve their scores.
- E. So the government plans to get almost 20 million more people to participate in regular exercises within five years.
- F. Some schools are organizing a variety of sports games like rope-skipping game, basketball, badminton, volleyball game and so on.

(中国中央电视台报道，在政府7月底发布“双减”文件后，仅一个多月内，就有3.3万家艺术和体育商店开业。)”可知，上文介绍的是“双减”政策，G项意为“它禁止在周末和节假日进行学术辅导，并命令学校减少作业的数量和所需的时间。”选项能够承接上文，选项中的“it”代指上文的““Double Reduction” document”，具体介绍了什么是“双减”政策。故选G。

【36题详解】

根据上文“Some China’s school children are short-sighted and nearly one in five between the ages of 6-17 is overweight or obese, National Health Commission data show. (国家卫生委员会的数据显示，中国的一些学龄儿童近视，在6-17岁之间，近五分之一的儿童超重或肥胖。)”可知，上文介绍的是中国学龄儿童的不健康的现象，E项意为“因此，政府计划在五年内增加近2000万人参加定期锻炼。”选项与上文构成因果关系，正是因为学龄儿童的不健康的现象，所以中国政府决定让更多的人参加定期锻炼。故选E。

【37题详解】

根据上文“Some schools are providing ice and snow sports optional courses for students. (一些学校为学生提供冰雪运动选修课。)”可知，上文是对学校为学生提供的体育锻炼的举例，F项意为“一些学校正在组织各种体育比赛，如跳绳比赛、篮球、羽毛球、排球比赛等。”选项能够承接上文，也是对学校为学生提供的体育锻炼的举例，学校会组织体育比赛，如跳绳比赛、篮球、羽毛球、排球比赛等。故选F。

(一位 39 岁的母亲, 在为儿子提供数学辅导的公司关闭后不久, 在儿子完成家庭作业后, 每个周日都会陪儿子去附近的公园慢跑。)”可知, 下文举例说明“双减”政策后, 学生增加了课后锻炼的时间, B 项意为“双减政策也给学生放学后锻炼的时间。”选项能够引起下文, 下文正是对“双减”政策给学生放学后锻炼的时间的举例说明。故选 B。

【39 题详解】

根据上文“China’s Tiger moms used to find classes after school to give our children an advantage in the intensely competitive education. (中国的“虎妈”们过去常常在放学后找班, 让我们的孩子在竞争激烈的教育中占据优势。)”可知, 上文介绍了中国的“虎妈”们过去执着于让孩子参加课外辅导, A 项意为“但现在, 她们不会再只是为了给孩子们找点事做就让孩子参加课外辅导班了。”选项与上文构成转折关系, 中国的“虎妈”们过去常常在放学后给孩子找辅导班, 但现在, “双减”政策后, 她们不会再这样做了。故选 A。

第三部分 书面表达 (共两节, 32 分)

第一节 (共 4 小题; 第 40、41 题各 2 分, 第 42 题 3 分, 第 43 题 5 分, 共 12 分)

阅读下面短文, 根据题目要求用英文回答问题。

Your Food Choices Affect the Earth’s Climate

Every action has a cost, even for growing food and delivering it to your dinner plate. A team of researchers has found that meat production releases more climate-warming pollution than it does when producing fruits, vegetables, nuts and grains. Their calculations suggest that people could do a lot to slow global warming if they limited the amount of meat they eat.

There are plenty of “costs” of food. As to the visible costs, people pay money for the food as well as the fuel needed to get groceries to the store or restaurant. And there are less-visible “costs” of food as well. Producing foods takes resources, for example, the water used to irrigate (灌溉) crop fields or the fertilizer and chemicals used to promote plant growth and fight pests.

Peter Scarborough at the University of Oxford in England decided to calculate some of the less-visible pollution created by food production. His team focused on greenhouse gases emitted through the production of our food, including carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>), methane (甲烷) and the nitrous oxide (氧化亚氮). All three gases are powerful in warming the earth’s atmosphere.

They conducted a series of experiments and fed the data collected into a computer and then included the amount of greenhouse gases linked with producing nearly 100 common foods. Then the computer matched those greenhouse-gas amounts to the mix of foods each person had reported eating.

It shows that the diet of someone whose meals included an average of 50 to 99 grams of meat each day would be responsible for the daily release of 5.6 kilograms of CO<sub>2</sub> equivalent (等量) while those vegans had the lowest diet-linked greenhouse-gas emissions (2.9 kg of CO<sub>2</sub> equivalent).

It is concluded that reducing the intake of meat and other animal-based products can make a valuable contribution to climate change reduction. And compared to meat, more plant-based food can be grown on more lands with less water and other resources. In places where many people are going hungry, raising animals for meat may make it harder to ensure that everyone gets enough to eat.

40. What do the researchers’ calculations suggest?

41. Why does the author say there are also less-visible “costs” of food?

42. Please decide which part is false in the following statement, then underline it and explain why.

Although plant-based food is harder to adapt to more types of lands than meat, it has a lower requirement of water and other resources.

43. Apart from food choices, what can you do to protect the environment? (In about 40 words)

【答案】40. Their calculations suggest that people could do a lot to slow global warming if they limited the amount of meat they eat.

41. Because producing foods takes resources, for example, the water used to irrigate crop fields or the fertilizer and chemicals used to promote plant growth and fight pests.

Because the author wants people to know that producing foods takes resources, for example, the water used to irrigate crop fields or the fertilizer and chemicals used to promote plant growth and fight pests.

42. Although plant-based food is harder to adapt to more types of lands than meat, it has a lower requirement of water and other resources. According to the text, the plant-based food can not only use less water and other resources, but such food can be grown on more lands. So it is easier to adapt to more types of lands than meat.

43. I will try my best to save electricity, for example, using energy-efficient light bulbs instead of regular bulbs, which can last longer. Also, I will make sure to turn off lights, the TV, and other appliances when I'm not using them. Another way to reduce electricity use is to lower the air conditioning or heat when it's not necessary.

【解析】

【分析】这是一篇说明文。文章介绍了一项研究结果——与生产水果、蔬菜、坚果和谷物相比，肉类生产会释放更多使气候变暖污染物。

【40题详解】

考查细节理解。由第一段中“A team of researchers has found that meat production releases more climate-warming pollution than it does when producing fruits, vegetables, nuts and grains. Their calculations suggest that people could do a lot to slow global warming if they limited the amount of meat they eat.”(一组研究人员发现，与生产水果、蔬菜、坚果和谷物相比，肉类生产会释放更多使气候变暖污染物。他们的计算表明，如果人们限制肉类的摄入量，他们可以在减缓全球变暖方面做很多事情)可知，减少肉类摄入，可以减缓全球变暖。故答案为 Their calculations suggest that people could do a lot to slow global warming if they limited the amount of meat they eat.

【41题详解】

考查细节理解。由第二段中“And there are less-visible “costs” of food as well. Producing foods takes resources, for example, the water used to irrigate crop fields or the fertilizer and chemicals used to promote plant growth and fight pests.”(此外，食品还有一些较为隐蔽的“成本”。生产食物需要资源，例如，灌溉农田的水，促进植物生长和防治害虫的化肥和化学品)可知，较为隐蔽的食品成本是生产食物需要资源，例如，灌溉农田的水，促进植物生长和防治害虫的化肥和化学品。故答案为 Because producing foods takes resources, for example, the water used to irrigate crop fields or the fertilizer and chemicals used to promote plant growth and fight pests.或 Because the author wants people to know that producing foods takes resources, for example, the water used to irrigate crop fields or the fertilizer and chemicals used to promote plant growth and fight pests.

考查推理判断。由最后一段“And compared to meat, more plant-based food can be grown on more lands with less water and other resources. In places where many people are going hungry, raising animals for meat may make it harder to ensure that everyone gets enough to eat.”(与肉类相比，更多的植物性食品可以在更多的土地上种植，水和其他资源更少。在 许多人挨饿的地方，饲养动物吃肉可能会使确保每个人都有足够的食物变得更加困难”可知，植物性食品比肉更容易适应各种土地。由此可知，Although plant-based food is harder to adapt to more types of lands than meat(尽管植物性食物比肉类更难适应更多种类的土地)陈述错误。故答案为 Although plant-based food is harder to adapt to more types of lands than meat, it has a lower requirement of water and other resources. According to the text, the plant-based food can not only use less water and other resources, but such food can be grown on more lands. So it is easier to adapt to more types of lands than meat.

【43 题详解】

开放性试题。根据题目要求，请考生除了食物选择，写还能做些什么来保护环境。这是要求考生自主发挥题型。考生可以联系生活实际情况，选择一个话题即可，比如解约用电，坐公交车，少用塑料袋等，注意字数不少于 40 字。其中一份参考答案：I will try my best to save electricity, for example, using energy-efficient light bulbs instead of regular bulbs, which can last longer. Also, I will make sure to turn off lights, the TV, and other appliances when I'm not using them. Another way to reduce electricity use is to lower the air conditioning or heat when it's not necessary.
