The Mississippi State University Extension Service is offering the Master Gardener training and certification online again this year.

Participants take 40 hours of instruction in horticulture (园艺) and related topics to become expert volunteers. Learn more and register for the first Master Gardener class of 2022 from February 1 to February 28 at <http://msuext.ms/mg>. Instruction for all classes is online and self-paced. The online class material is offered from March 15 to May 15.

About Volunteering

"The Master Gardener program trains active volunteers who exchange the 40 hours of educational training they receive for 40 hours of volunteer service within one year of their training," said Jeff Wilson, a horticulture specialist of the Master Gardener program. "These Master Gardeners continue to be assets to their communities as, in future years, they continue to receive training and spend a minimum of 20 community service hours a year to maintain their certified status."

Few in Bangladesh would deny(否认) that their country has had remarkable success in getting kids into classrooms. Four decades ago, less than a third of children finished primary school. Today, 80% do.

However, improving the quality of education has proved trickier. More than half of Bangladeshi ten-year-olds in school are not skilled in reading, according to the World Bank, and more than a quarter of those aged between 15 and 24 are not in education, employment or training.

In some respects, unimpressive outcomes have not held back Bangladesh. The economy has been growing at an annual rate of 6% for the past decade, reaching 8% in 2019. But that is because labor is plentiful and cheap, not because it is skilled. Bangladeshi laborers often earn less than the Indian workers in foreign countries.

Long-term growth will rely on moving from cheap to skilled labor, says Hossain Zillur Rahman of a research centre in Dhaka. “Those skills need to be created now.”

The government is shaking up the curriculum as a way to achieve that. The plans, which are due to be carried out by 2025, focus on shifting away from mindlessly memorizing textbooks towards building useful skills. All exams will be cancelled until third grade. Year-end public exams, which start in middle school, will wait until tenth grade.

The new curriculum is also designed to address the mismatch between education and the skills required in the economy. A choice of two practical subjects from such options as woodworking, software design, car repair and child care will be required for high-schoolers.

But changing the curriculum might not solve many of the other problems contributing to Bangladesh’s poor learning outcomes. Teachers are poorly paid, trained and too few in number. Bangladesh has the largest class sizes in South Asia, with one teacher to 45 pupils in middle school.

“Some of the recently announced reforms amount to trying to run before learning to walk. How can software be taught well when the students cannot read well?” asks Mr. Rahman. “Many of the good curriculum changes introduced over the past decade are yet to be carried out.”

第二节 (共5小题;每小题2.5分,满分12.5分)

阅读下面短文,从短文后的选项中选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

The benefits of outdoor play are fairly well-understood by parents. 36. As a mother of three energetic children who spend considerable amounts of time outdoors, I have figured out some good ways to maximize outdoor playtime. I'd like to share some of my advice with readers who might be struggling with this.

37. If you start viewing daily outdoor play as being as important as a meal or a good night's sleep, you'll start to find more time for it. Think of it as nonnegotiable; no extra things should happen until outdoor playtime has been checked off the list.

Replace organized activities with unorganized ones. Instead of packing your after-school calendar with sports training and interest classes, cancel those for at least several times a week and just tell your kids they can play outside instead. 38.

Mandate(强制规定) outdoor family time on weekends. My family goes cross-country skiing every single Saturday morning in winter. 39, even when the temperature drops to -20°C . This time is fiercely protected because of the benefits it has for all of us—exercise, fresh air, satisfaction and family bonding.

Go outdoors with your kids. If you go outside, younger ones in particular will want to be there, too. Make it fun by lighting a campfire in the backyard or setting up a camp stove to make hot chocolate. Or you can have a picnic or work in a garden together. 40; you can be present without being engaged.

- A. We never skip it
B. Start thinking of it as a necessity
C. We adjust the skiing routine accordingly
D. List special activities for outdoor playtime
E. These unexpected arrangements will surely excite your kids
F. You can even just sit and read a book while your kids play nearby
G. However, it's hard for many parents to fit outdoor playtime into their kids' days

In 2008, I traveled to a remote region in southwest China to tell the story about the Nu River. The word “Nu” means “angry” in Chinese. Here many 41 lived in the mountains along the narrow river. There were 42 bridges over the river and most people from the villages had to 43 it by zip lines(滑索).

I went to a place closest to a town on a market day. When I got there, a stream of people was already crossing over the 44 waters of the river. They did it 45 or in pairs. Some of them even went with 46 in their arms, such as chickens and pigs. I even saw a goat.

With a camera around my neck, I hooked onto the return line and moved forward until I 47 midway above the river. The waters did look angry below me.

Hanging over the river, I 48 people crossing until those waiting to return home became very 49. I pulled myself back to the roadside to let them pass, and then hooked onto the line again for another try. Suddenly, I saw a group of people were heading toward the zip lines with a 50!

“What’s the angle?” I asked myself, as I 51 my position. I wanted the river waters in the picture but that was not easy to do. Before I could check all the 52, they tied a rope around the cow, hooked it on the line, and gave it a push. Kicking its legs in the air, the cow 53 the steep line above the angry river.

I reached the line’s end just as the cow closed in. For a second, my camera was in the cow’s face. The view was 54—completed by the angry river below.

Nowadays, these zip lines have been 55 by modern bridges and government housing projects have been designed to encourage the people to move down to the riversides.

第二节 (满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料,根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段,使之构成一篇完整的短文。

I couldn't believe it. As I walked into campus, I saw posters everywhere with the words "Throw out the student union president!" on them.

As my schoolmates began arriving on campus, I watched them gather around the posters and then looked toward me because I was the president. At that moment, I felt that I was torn into pieces and tried my best to stay calm.

When I was elected the president, my friends said it was one of the best campaigns they had ever seen. I started it by organizing a group of students to climb the mountain near our school. When we reached the top of the mountain, it felt like we were at summer camp. We laughed, danced and told jokes. It was really fun. While playing like little children, we agreed to do it again the following week and decided that each of us would bring a new friend.

We started out with a small group of hikers. But as the word spread, the number of participants increased. One day on campus, I met a girl in a wheelchair and we started talking. Her name was Grace. I asked her if she had ever been to the top of the mountain. She said she hadn't. I told her that my friends and I would carry her if she were up for it. Grace accepted the offer. The next time when we went up the mountain, we took turns to carry her in her chair all the way to the mountain top.

This was probably one of the most meaningful things I did during the campaign. By the end, we had over seventy-five people climbing the mountain on Thursdays, including Grace. All of us who participated felt like we were part of something much bigger than we were. We were building a community and it felt great and no one was surprised that I had won the election.

注意:1. 续写词数应为 150 左右;

2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。
